Bruce Edwards' story is one of perseverance, resilience, and unwavering passion. For over five decades, he has dedicated his life to the game of golf, serving as a caddy at the prestigious Augusta National Golf Club. Through his journey, he has witnessed countless iconic moments in golf history and forged lasting relationships with some of the game's greatest legends.

Early Life and to Golf

Born and raised in Augusta, Georgia, Bruce's first encounter with golf came at the age of 12 when he caddied for a local businessman at the Augusta Country Club. Captivated by the game's intricacies and the camaraderie among the players, he knew right then and there that his destiny lay on the golf course.

At the age of 17, Bruce was offered a position as a caddy at Augusta National, the hallowed ground of the Masters Tournament. It was here that his life would take a profound turn.

A Masterful Caddy

As a caddy at Augusta National, Bruce quickly gained a reputation for his exceptional work ethic and attention to detail. He was known for his ability to anticipate the needs of his players, always being one step ahead and providing them with the necessary information and support.

Over the years, Bruce caddied for some of the biggest names in golf, including Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer, and Gary Player. He was present for some of the most memorable moments in Masters history, including Jack Nicklaus' record-breaking 18th major victory in 1986.

Beyond the Course

Bruce's influence extended beyond the golf course. He became a respected figure in the Augusta community, serving as a mentor to young caddies and aspiring golfers. He also played a pivotal role in promoting diversity and inclusion in the game.

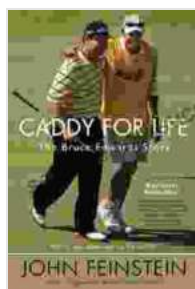

In 2013, Bruce was honored with the Lifetime Achievement Award from the Golf Writers Association of America. This prestigious award recognized his unwavering dedication to the game and his positive impact on the lives of countless individuals.

The Legacy of a Master Caddy

Today, at the age of 74, Bruce Edwards remains an active presence at Augusta National. He continues to caddy for select players and serves as a consultant for the club. His legacy as a master caddy is etched into the annals of golf history.

Bruce's story is an inspiring reminder of the power of perseverance and passion. Through his unwavering commitment to the game, he has achieved extraordinary success and left an enduring mark on the world of golf.
