Chapter 1

The Mysterious Affair at Styles begins with a description of Styles, the country house where the murder takes place. The house is described as a "large, rambling old house, built in the early Victorian era." The house is surrounded by a large garden, and there is a river running through the property. The house is owned by Emily Inglethorp, a wealthy widow who lives there with her family and friends.

The first chapter of the novel introduces the main characters. Hercule Poirot is a Belgian detective who has been hired by John Cavendish, Emily Inglethorp's stepson, to investigate the murder. Poirot is described as a "small, round man" with a "large, egg-shaped head." He is a brilliant detective, and he is known for his ability to solve even the most difficult cases.

John Cavendish is a young man who is engaged to marry Mary Cavendish, Emily Inglethorp's daughter. John is described as a "handsome, athletic young man." He is a kind and caring person, and he is devoted to Mary.

Mary Cavendish is a young woman who is beautiful and intelligent. She is a kind and compassionate person, and she is loved by everyone who knows her.

The other characters in the novel include:

- Emily Inglethorp: The wealthy widow who is murdered
- Alfred Inglethorp: Emily Inglethorp's husband
- Lawrence Cavendish: Emily Inglethorp's son
- Cynthia Murdoch: Lawrence Cavendish's wife
- Doctor Bauerstein: Emily Inglethorp's doctor
- Evelyn Howard: Emily Inglethorp's nurse

The first chapter of the novel ends with the discovery of Emily Inglethorp's body. She has been poisoned, and Poirot is called in to investigate her murder.

Chapter 2

Poirot begins his investigation by interviewing the members of the household. He learns that Emily Inglethorp had been suffering from a heart condition, and that she had been taking a medicine prescribed by Doctor Bauerstein. Poirot also learns that Emily Inglethorp had changed her will shortly before her death, leaving her entire fortune to her son, Lawrence.

Poirot suspects that Emily Inglethorp was poisoned, and he sets out to find the killer. He examines the evidence, and he interviews the suspects. He also conducts a number of experiments to try to determine how Emily Inglethorp was poisoned.

Poirot eventually discovers that Emily Inglethorp was poisoned with strychnine. He also discovers that the strychnine was administered in her medicine. Poirot then sets out to find the person who gave Emily Inglethorp the poison.

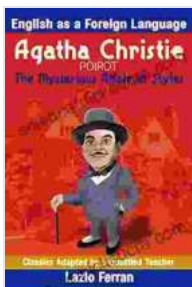

Chapter 3

Poirot continues his investigation, and he eventually discovers that Emily Inglethorp was poisoned by her husband, Alfred Inglethorp. Alfred Inglethorp had been having an affair with another woman, and he wanted to marry her. He knew that Emily Inglethorp would never agree to a divorce, so he decided to kill her.

Poirot arrests Alfred Inglethorp for murder, and he is eventually found guilty and sentenced to death. The Mysterious Affair at Styles is a classic English mystery novel that is full of twists and turns.
